クリミア戦争時の政府批判（1854年）

- 1820～50年代にかけての『タイムズ』は、他紙を凌駕する発行部数・広告収入、独自の取材網を盾に政治権力から独立した立場で世論に大きな影響力をもつにいたった
- 「The Thunderer」(雷を落とす者)の異名
- 特にクリミア戦争(1853-1856)時の痛烈な政府批判は政策変更や内閣総辞職につながったことで知られる

There is no use disguising the matter. We are not speaking from our own correspondence only. We are not saying what we think alone. We say, on the evidence of every letter that has been received in this country, and we echo the opinion of almost every experienced soldier or well-informed gentleman, when we say that the noblest army England ever sent from these shores has been sacrificed to the grossest mismanagement. Incompetency, lethargy, aristocratic hauteur, official indifference, favour, routine, perverseness, and stupidity reign, revel, and riot in the camp before Sebastopol, in the harbour of Balaklava, in the hospitals of Scutari, and how much nearer home we do not venture to say. We say it with the extremest reluctance,—no one sees or hears anything of the Commander-in-Chief.

名物記者 ジョージ・オーガスタス・サラ「リチャード・ピゴットの告白」(1889年2月27日)

...(ピゴットの)告白が終わると、ラブーシェア氏は飲み物を取りに書斎を出て行った。そうして二人だけ残されている間にピゴットが新たな告白をしてこなかったのには、心底ほっとした。もし彼が(17世紀の)ライハウス陰謀事件に実は加担していたとか、チャールズ一世の死刑執行人が実は自分だったとか言い出したらどうしようという不安が襲ってきたからである。この状況はやや気まずいものだった。口笛でも吹いて切り抜ける方法もあるが、残念ながら私は口笛の吹き方を知らない。

Times International Edition to Join Herald Tribune - Washington Post

The International Edition of the New York Times will combine Monday, May 22, with the New York Herald Tribune-Washington Post in Paris to publish a single newspaper, The International Herald Tribune.

Utilizing all the news resources of The Washington Post and of The New York Times, it will be distributed in 72 countries throughout the world with the largest circulation of any American newspaper ever printed abroad.

Robert T. MacDonald will continue as publisher and Murray M. Weiss as editor. Sydney Gruson, Editor and Chief Executive Officer of the Times' International Edition, will remain with the new newspaper during the transition. The paper will be published in the Herald Tribune building at 11 Rue de Berri in Paris.

Announcement of the new newspaper combination and of a new partnership to publish it was made in New York today by John Hay Whitney, Chairman, and Mrs. Katharine Graham, co-Chairman, of the New York Herald Tribune-Washington Post, together with Arthur Ochs Sulzberger, President and Publisher of the New York Times.

Its appearance on Monday will be the second major recent change in the eighty-year history of the Herald Tribune in Paris.

Last September, when the circulation of the Herald Tribune in Paris was at a record high of 62,000 copies daily, The Washington Post Co., of which Mrs. Katharine Graham is President, acquired a share in the paper. The new joint venture company that will begin operation Monday provides for a one-third interest for the Times and continues the relative interests of Mr. Whitney and The Washington Post as they had been in the remaining two-thirds.

The Times, with a current circulation of 47,000 copies, began daily publication in Europe in June, 1946. At that time, all of the editorial work on the paper was done in New York and mats ready to be cast and printed were flown across the Atlantic to Paris every night. In 1952, the printing operation was moved to Amsterdam. In 1960, however, the paper moved once again to Paris, there to publish a simultaneous edition of the New York paper, considerably condensed. Gradually, this evolved into a more autonomous edition. It has been under the direction of Mr. Gruson for the past seven months.

The Herald Tribune-Washington Post traces its history directly to the founding in 1887 of the Paris Herald by James Gordon Bennett. It has been published daily in Paris since then as an independent newspaper whose contributors have ranged from relatively obscure newspapermen to great names of literature and politics including Ernest Hemingway and Karl Marx.

In making the announcement today, Mr. Whitney commented: "Our intention is to continue to go forward, increasing our news coverage commensurate with this great increase in our resources. We hope to become of even greater service to the internationally-minded communities abroad."

Mrs. Graham also welcomed the new venture, noting that the paper would expand in content as well as in circulation and said that it would continue to have the fullest possible contribution of the world-wide resources of The Washington Post.

Mr. Sulzberger said: "We are interested in maintaining and strengthening the importance of the American voice abroad. Our new newspaper will be able to accomplish this admirably."

Final farewell to Hong Kong

Chinese promise to preserve laws and democracy

Prime Minister Blair and Jonathan Blumkin in talks

BRITAIN's final farewell to Hong Kong, the most successful transfer of power in the world, was set to begin today as the Chinese government promised to preserve the territory's laws and democracy.

In the end, the handover from British to Chinese rule was a triumph. The British government had secured the best deal for Hong Kong, and the Chinese government had agreed to accept the terms of the handover. A tearful salute to the last jewel in the crown

From ANN LESLIE in Hong Kong

A TRIUMPHANT Communist China, in the presence of an impassive Prince Charles, descendant of the Queen whom they first captured this week, took back the last jewel in the British Crown last night — and crossed.

The People's Liberation Army musicians played a specially composed salute to the last jewel in the crown.

Outside the grand new Convention Centre, thousands of the Chinese, protesting against the abolition of democracy at midnight, tried to make their voices heard in the last — and were deflected.

Our role here began with greed, the desire to make money to finance a weak China to buy her weapons and — opium.

As Governor Chris Patten stepped out in his farewell speech, that same daughter of Britain, spokeswoman for Hong Kong, began with money which from today's vantage point, at the end of the following century, no one would wish to seek to cash in.

But to add: they might have had most of those who live in Hong Kong now do so because of events in our own country which would have left the defectors.

In other words, most of the people living in Hong Kong could have been here, not the Chinese mainland, but the British, and the few who do so.

When Chris Patten first arrived in Hong Kong, a Chinese, overjoyed to be ruled by a man who had been the generalissimo of Britain, will soon disappear.

Yes, the "British" element, will be taken up by the city of Hong Kong, but the "British" element, will be taken up by the city of Hong Kong, but the "British" element, will be taken up by the city of Hong Kong.

Charles, Prince of gloom as the flag comes down

By ANN LESLIE

Charles, Prince of Wales, was seen in a state of gloom as he walked with his wife, Princess Diana, through the streets of Hong Kong on the day the British flag was lowered for the last time. The prince was seen to be in a state of deep sadness, and his wife was seen to be holding his hand in a comforting gesture. The couple was seen to be walking slowly, and their faces were seen to be filled with a sense of loss and sadness. The prince was seen to be looking down, and his wife was seen to be looking at him with a look of concern. The couple was seen to be walking through a crowd of people, and their faces were seen to be filled with a sense of loss and sadness. Play to the rules, Blair warns Peking

By ANN LESLIE

Prime Minister Tony Blair has warned the Chinese government to play by the rules of international law as it prepares to hand over Hong Kong to the British. Blair said that the Chinese government should not use force to take control of the territory, and that it should respect the rights of the Hong Kong people. He said that the British government would stand by the people of Hong Kong, and that it would do everything in its power to ensure that they were able to exercise their rights. TRIUMPHALISM AND APPREHENSION IN HONG KONG END OF THE EMPIRE

at the final sunset

Chris Patten receives a gift from a young girl as he leaves Hong Kong.

Chris Patten, the last Governor of Hong Kong, is seen in a moment of triumph and apprehension as he leaves the territory. He is seen to be holding a gift that has been presented to him by a young girl. The girl is seen to be looking at Patten with a look of admiration and respect. Patten is seen to be looking at the girl with a look of gratitude and pride. The scene is set against a backdrop of a sunset, and the atmosphere is one of both celebration and sadness. 歴史研究においては、起こったことが重要であるとともに、それが、どのように人々に伝わったかもまた大事なことです。出来事に続く政治問題や社会問題、文化摩擦といった流れでその出来事を捉え、検証するためにもタイムズは必要不可欠なツールではないでしょうか。

デイリー・メールの女性読者は平均的な女性だと考えればよいと思います。(…)女性運動家とそうではない女性の現実的な温度差が、デイリー・メールを通して透けて見えてくるかもしれません。

新聞を通して歴史や世相の推移、政治的対立を見るとすれば、タイムズだけでなく、現代ではインディペンデント、サンデー・タイムズ、ガーディアンのような高級紙や、デイリー・メールやデイリー・ミラーのような中間紙、大衆紙にも眼を向ける必要があるでしょう。

生活文化の視点から見ると、タイムズは事実、史実の集まりというイメージが強く、政治的な問題についての国家の判断を知るにはタイムズを参照するのがよいわけですが、普通の国民の考えや興味を知りたいければ、デイリー・メールを参照するのが一番です。
