Notable Contributors and Content Highlights

George Augustus Sala (1828-1895): One of the most famous journalists of the day; a reporter-celebrity who became the newspaper's flagship writer. Sala pioneered a more lively, personal style of journalism and was known for travelling with a revolver, corkscrew, and dress suit. He reported from all over the world, including Russia, North Africa, Australia, and Mexico. He also reported on the U.S. Civil War.

Winston Churchill: Churchill's first journalistic content is contained within the pages of The Telegraph. His series of war letters from India appeared in the paper at the close of the nineteenth century when Churchill was a young army officer.

The Daily Telegraph/Kaiser Wilhelm Affair: In 1908, The Telegraph published an infamous interview with Kaiser Wilhelm, the last German Emperor. In it, he declared the German people had no care for the British, claiming "you English are mad, mad, mad as march hares", that France and Russia had tried to convince Germany to enter the Boar War against Britain, and that the German naval build-up was aimed more at Japan than Britain. These comments alienated many of the country's would-be allies.

The Cryptic Crossword Puzzle: On the 13th of January 1942, a crossword puzzle was circulated in The Telegraph to recruit Allied codebreakers during the Second World War. The War Office contacted Those who completed the puzzle within the 12-minute deadline regarding a matter of national importance. Successful candidates became codebreakers at Bletchley Park.
