ABOUT THIS RESOURCE

China and the Modern World is a series of digital archive collections sourced from preeminent libraries and archives across the world, including the Second Historical Archives of China and the British Library. The series covers a period of about 180 years (1800s to 1980s) when China experienced radical and often traumatic transformations from an inward-looking imperial dynasty into a globally engaged republic. Consisting of monographs, manuscripts, periodicals, correspondence and letters, historical photos, ephemera, and other kinds of historical documents, these collections provide excellent primary source materials for the understanding and research of the various aspects...

Some officials are reported to be very active, while others are lax, but it is difficult to prevent secret growth amongst border tribes and in lonely valleys.

Chekiang: On March 11th, it was reported from Wenchow, which has had the notoriety of being a great opiumgrowing district that "during the past two years a most determined and sincere effort has been made by the officials to suppress the cultivation of the poppy. Fifteen months ago, tens of thousands of acres were under cultivation despite the proclamations in every town and village forbidding the planting of the poppy under most severe penalties. Now the reward of such consistent and strenuous 'action by the officials is being reaped in that the vast areas of land formerly given over to the cultivation, of poppy are bearing a most promising' crop of wheat. With the exception of four villages in Sich'i and two in Noech'i, it can be said the old area is* clear. Only in out-of-the-way places, amongst the innumerable hills, do we hear of small patches here and there. Even these are being diligently sought out. To-day, the officials in charge of the bureau for the suppression of opiumgrowing, made an appeal to the missions working in Wenchowfu for co-operation in finding out any places where opium is still grown. He suggested that the native pastors and evangelists should report any crops, great or small, seen by them during their journeys. He further stated that a number of soldiers would be sent to the six villages mentioned above for the purpose of destroying the crops and arresting their planters. The impossible is thus being accomplished."

Hunan: On October 27, the opium suppression bureau of Hunan burned a vast quantity of opium on the drill ground of Changsha, as follows:

	Weight in ounces.
Bought from Opium dealers.....	4,300.00
Stock unsold and held by opium-merchants.....	34,376.50
Bought from small dealers.....	2,850.00
Delivered by branch offices of the Bureau.....	31,561.80
Deposited by smokers.....	319.00
Discovered from secret stores.....	19,344.00
Total.....	91,551.00

Proximity

Use Proximity Operators to Define Distance Between Terms

Proximity operators (Nn, Wn) can be used to tell the search engine how closely terms must be to each other within a document. They operate like the AND operator in that both terms must be found.

Use Nn to find terms when order doesn't matter

The Nn (near) operator finds terms n words apart in either direction of the first term.

- memory n5 repressed* finds documents that contain memory and repressed within five or fewer words of each other.

Use Wn to find terms after the first

The Wn (within) operator finds the second term within n words after the first.

- shared w3 values* finds documents that contain the term values within three or fewer words after the term shared.

ABOUT THIS RESOURCE

China and the Modern World is a series of digital archive collections sourced from preeminent libraries and archives across the world, including the Second Historical Archives of China and the British Library. The series covers a period of about 180 years (1800s to 1980s) when China experienced radical and often traumatic transformations from an inward-looking imperial dynasty into a globally engaged republic. Consisting of monographs, manuscripts, periodicals, correspondence and letters, historical photos, ephemera, and other kinds of historical documents, these collections provide excellent primary source materials for the understanding and research of the various aspects...

和介绍该典藏的文章

Our modern-day fascination with China derives in large part from its recent rise as a modernised global power. Indeed, such terms as 'the rise of China' or 'modern China' are almost ubiquitous if one lives in today's West. Perhaps as a result of this new public interest, increasing numbers of academics have been attracted to research China and its modernity. Some fundamental questions, however, arise: What does it mean when we talk about 'modernity' in China? Is China's modernity any different from Western

I. INDO-CHINESE MISCELLANEA.

OFFICIAL PAPER FROM THE CANTON GOVERNMENT RESPECTING OPIUM, DATED APRIL 5, 1823.—YUEN, the Viceroy, and AU, the Hoppo of Canton, hereby issue a proclamation to the Hong merchants, with the contents of which let them make themselves fully acquainted.

Opium is an article which has long been most strictly prohibited by his Imperial Majesty's command, and frequent proclamation have been issued against it, which are on record. But the passages on the coast of Canton being very numerous; Macao being the resort of foreigners; and Whampoa being the anchorage for foreign ships, should be more strictly watched and searched.
